

Let's draw some faces! These faces need to feel some emotions. Let's give them some!

excited

scared

happy

sad

mad

sleepy

too cool

confused

Objects can feel emotions, too!
This time, you pick the emotions
you want to draw.

The list exercise! I love making lists before I start drawing to help my brain loosen up. Want to try it? I'll say a word, and you just write things the word reminds you of. Could be absolutely anything. They don't even have to relate to the original word! This is just to get your mind thinking and working properly! It is sometimes called free writing or brainstorming. No wrong answers here!

The word is . . . tree.

BIRD!

<hr/>	<hr/>
<hr/>	<hr/>
<hr/>	<hr/>
<hr/>	<hr/>
<hr/>	<hr/>
<hr/>	<hr/>
<hr/>	<hr/>
<hr/>	<hr/>
<hr/>	<hr/>

Look at all these wild ideas. Now let's draw! Fill up the space below with little drawings inspired by the things you wrote above.

These townspeople are out walking their pets! What do their pets look like? I want to know if they are dangerous-looking or friendly because I will behave a certain way depending on what you draw . . .

a flower pet?

a puffy pet?

a slippery pet?

IDEA ZONE: Pets can be anything! Dogs, cats, alligators, beetles, monsters, tubas, robots, dragons—so many options!

Bartholomew the inventor of useful and useless things has come to show off his latest inventions. Well . . . he has the names figured out at least. Perhaps you could draw his inventions for him!

bubble car

pumpkin lamp

fuzzy chair

ice cream sled

snake car

kite castle

(you name one!)

flying boot